1. Russian strength in Germany has been increased by two new armies: the reactivated Third Mechanized Army and a tank army whose designation is not known to source. He also does not know whether this reactivation is accomplished or only in the planning stage.
2. Between January and March, Flauen (KL2) received 700 new troops. Such new arrivals are quarantined and politically oriented for three months before being assigned to posts.
3. Beginning 1 April, German paramilitary police will be given military training courses.
4. Liaison between German women and Soviet officials is considered a serious threat to Soviet security. The MGB no longer clears its arrests of such officers with local Komendaturas. If only suspected of such a relationship, the offender is immediately arrested; evidence to support the case or clear the detainee is gathered later.
5. In the USSR, demobilized officers who held temporary wartime ranks are being called up. After training, their former ranks are restored to them.
